Campaign submission: Entry Form & PowerPoint presentation (20 slides)

Your team is expected to submit a campaign via an online Entry Portal. You can use the Entry Form word document to collaborate with your team members as you prepare your entry. It mirrors our online entry form, providing you with all the questions as they appear in the Entry Portal. At the end of the online form, there is space to submit your PowerPoint presentation describing your case and creative materials. Please note, the PowerPoint is limited to 20 slides, comprising the following:

- Introduction/Title: 1 slide
- Team members (profile): 1 slide
- Research / Strategy / Media: 13 slides (format & structure to be decided by the team)
- Creative: 5 slides.

Please note that all campaigns must be submitted in English and that EACA/edcom has the right to use them for educational and promotional purposes. However, if the client likes your idea and would like to implement (some parts of) it, we will make sure to facilitate the conversation between both parties so that your team deserves all credit for its creative ideas and insightful thinking.

Judging Process

Your campaign will go through 2 rounds of judging. First round is composed of 40 jurors, 20 representing the academia world and 20 the industry (agency & client). The first round of judging takes place in March/April with the Top 10 finalists' announcement in April.

The second-round jury is composed of up to 10 senior academics and industry professionals. The finalists will be asked to prepare a 10-minute video to pitch their campaign that will be distributed to the jurors a week before the final judging. Videos might also be posted on the edcom website. In May, there will be a 2h session: Q&A with the finalists and the final jury who will have the opportunity to ask the teams several questions. After that the jury will elaborate for 2h and choose the winner. The next day, there will be a 1,5h feedback from the jury session and the announcement of the winner.
